Waffle Pique Makes Bonnet That is Tied and Pleated

Waffle pique sports bonnet with sunburst pleats at front, tied under chin.

WHEN YOU AND I WERE YOUNG—

Before Grandmother ever heard of the many new-fangled products placed before the public, she had ways of substituting, that to us would seem very crude indeed. For instance, in the matter of the care of the teeth, she solved the problem as follows:

"Fine charcoal powder is the cheapest and the best cleansing tooth-powder. It has grit enough to remove deposits, and absorbs impure secretions. (2) Powdered orris root, one pound; English pre. chalk, one pound; pulverized sugar, three-quarters pound; white Castile soap, half pound; bicarbonate soda, one-eighth pound; oil of wintergreen, if desired. (3) Orris root one-third, prepared chalk one-third, and pumice-stone one-quarter."

THE STORIES TOLD BY THE SOAP BARS—

A dainty piece of toilet soap lay on the shelf beside a plain, very ordinary bar of soap, and as they were both lonesome they both began a conversation.

"Where was your home," asked Miss Dainty.

"My home," answered Miss Plain-barr "was away out in the country on a beautiful farm, where there was always fresh air and sunshine, shade and quietness, so different from all these city noises, and air filled with such a variety of strange unpleasant odours."

"What sort of a person was your mistress and what sort of a factory was your home?" queried Miss Dainty.

"My mistress was a fine looking lady with cheeks reddened by the lovely breezes and abundance of work for exercise as well as from the wonderful food the dairy, the garden and the field supplied for meals. And my existence began in the woodlot where the farmer cut down the broken trees, the disease attacked trees and those too close to others for room for growth."

"And what happened to you after you were cut down?" eagerly asked Miss Dainty.

"Oh, we had a lovely ride along a bush path, down the length of several pasture fields, up a lane with flowers and shrubs on each side into a yard near a quaint house in a lovely old orchard. We were laid in a pile, and at leisure moments the farmer made the trees into short lengths. When the north winds began to blow and bluster we were carried into a shed and in the winter evenings we were carried in and made a warm cosy fire for our Master and mistress. (We saw them spend many happy evenings during the winter months. We were carried out as ashes and carefully put away. When the warm breezes came again and the snow was gone, one day our Master and Mistress put us into a barrel set on a platform which had a slant. Then our mistress carried out a pail of hot water every little while and poured it on us until we were soaking, and she had a pan ready to hold the lye that drained from the barrel. In this large pan where the lye was poured were scraps of fat that had been saved during the winter months and when sufficient lye had run to absorb the fat, our Mistress stopped pouring water in the barrel of ashes."

"Then on a bright clear day with plenty of sunshine, and when warm little breezes were stirring, this large pan would be placed on a fire outside and boiled until all the fat was dissolved. That was the most uncomfortable of all our experiences for we couldn't see that we were giving any pleasure, as we did when we were burned as wood to give heat and comfort on the cold winter days. But the heat eventually died down and borax and ammonia were added and next, day we were hard and were cut into bars. My Mistress says that her grandmother didn't have the borax and ammonia to add to their cleansing power to soap. She said, too, that she doesn't intend again to go to the trouble of making lye, as it can be purchased in small cans, having been made in factories from ashes and substances containing alkali."

"I feel perfectly sure it will not be nearly so interesting a life in a factory process of being made as my home process with a happy Master and Mistress. My final duty is to cleanse the clothing on wash day and I'll do that real well."

CHARACTER REVEALED IN EATING—

If you are anxious to size up a person's character watch him at work with his knife and fork.

The person who removes the food gingerly from the fork with his lips is particular over trifles and hasty-tempered, but large hearted and generous.

He who mixes everything together on his plate is apt to make a hash of life in general. Although nothing particularly bad can be said of him, nothing he has ever done or will do will be much to his credit.

The quick eater is generally a quick thinker, lively, versatile, and ambitious. At times he may be rather unreliable and apt to rush at things without proper forethought, but he possesses a nice mixture of humor and sentiment.

The slow eater is generally a plodder along the road of life, happy to remain in the same groove, unambitious, steady, and contented, with no particular attributes beyond living and letting live.

SALLY'S SALLIES

By LISBETH

HATS ARE wacky this season—hats to make it impervious to crushing and moisture. Another advantage of this lace is that it needs no backing. It comes in white and navy, black, navy and white being the present favorites, with pink the favorite in pastels.

For sports we show this waffle pique bonnet with sunburst pleats at the front. It is for the young and gay, of course, for beach and sports wear, and is light, cool and pert. It ties under the chin, as you see, and is designed by Jean King of New York.

Somewhat similar but much more dressy is the embroidered batiste chapeau which is very suggestive of a baby's bonnet. Really it derived its inspiration from a Swedish cap.

This is worn set well back on the head, and a voluminous veil adds the sophisticated touch.

Washable Bonnets
Then there is the washable button bonnet sponsored by one house. Each button is a headsize, and there are eight in all. If this number proves too few, move one forward to fit your head, say the makers.

These hats may be laid flat to launder, and the brim is adjustable, and may be worn turned up or down.

These bonnets come in various materials—colored dot Swiss, and other thin materials, plain and printed cottons and linens, seersuckers, chambrays and piques.

Another innovation is that you can drape your own hat, with the help of a frame and material provided by the thoughtful milliner. This model consists of an open cylinder that is wider at the top, and is made of rayon petersham—it has a contrasting facing of the same material.

Makes Adjustment
The wearer may make a simple adjustment to change the character of the hat in half a dozen or more ways. The trick is that the arrangement stays put because there is an invisible wire which keeps it in place and easily snaps it out again when needed. This, of course, is a patented device. There is also a flower-patterned

Green Salad With Tomato Salad Dressing

Coffee or Tea

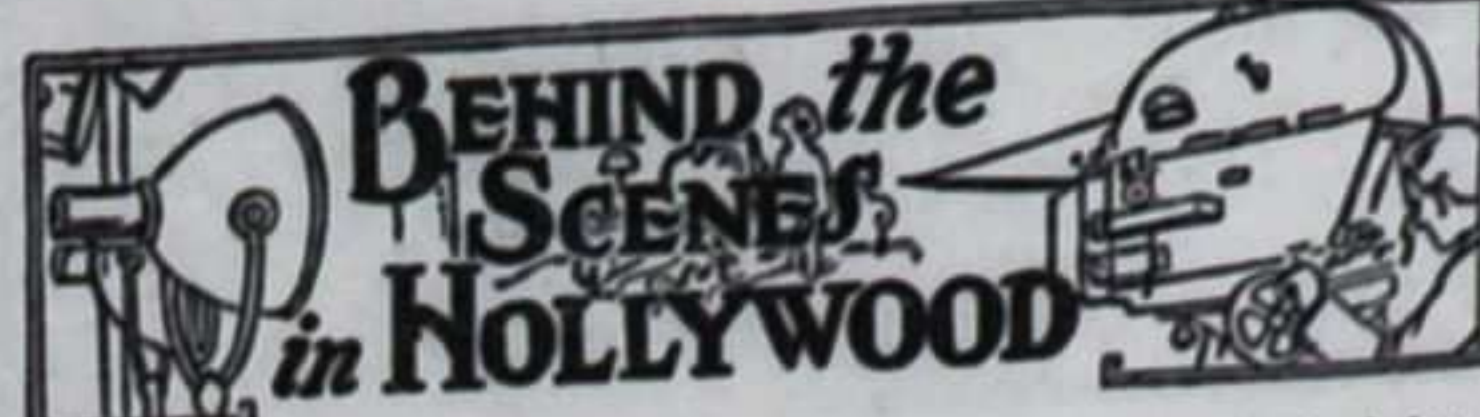

There are many greens to use in a salad these bright days. Green onions, lettuce watercress, tender raw spinach leaves, a few small radish leaves. Have you ever eaten them? They are hot and spicy, and if you only use the very small leaves, they won't be so very rough. At any rate you won't mind it. Nasturtium leaves are also very good in salads.

Today's Recipes

TOMATO SALAD DRESSING—
Two ounces tomato juice, three-fourths cup vinegar one-half cup olive oil, one tablespoon worcestershire sauce, three tablespoons grated onion, three-fourths cup sugar. Put all these ingredients in a large jar, and mix them thoroughly. Measure out one-half cup of the mixture, and to this add the following: One teaspoon salt, one teaspoon paprika, one teaspoon dry mustard. Mix this half cup of spiced ingredients until well blended, then add it to the contents of the large jar. Seal the jar with a rubber ring as in canning fruit, and always shake thoroughly before using.

Strawberry Pie

One pie shell, one quart berries, three-fourths cup sugar, one cup water, two teaspoons corn starch. Fill pie shell with largest berries set on stem end. Crush rest of berries and add water, sugar, and the corn starch mixed with a little water. Cook until thickened and pour over berries in shell.

Hollywood—It's another amiable wastrel role for Bing Crosby in "Sing You Sinners" at Paramount studios. In the new picture Bing plays a "swapper" who winds up his trading with a race horse.

Fred MacMurray and a new boy find, Donald O'Connor, play his brothers.

Director Wesley Ruggles is shooting a cafe scene. It is supposed to be somewhere in Los Angeles and is fixed up like the waterfront with nets, boats, pilings and a dance floor made to look like a stretch of clear water next to the dock.

The set is full of "customers", waiters, musicians, just like any of the busy night spots the stars frequent. But Bing, who is usually a bundle of energy at such spots, dancing, visiting pals, taking a turn at the mike, wanders around the set looking bored while Ruggles gets the shot lined up.

The scene shows the three brothers doing a singing act. The two older ones have put everything on Bing's horse, but the kid has secretly agreed to throw the race for a price, figuring certain money is better than maybe.

Their song is broken up by jittery remarks about the race now going on elsewhere in the story. It's a difficult routine and calls for lots of takes, which contrasts with Bing's usual habit of knocking off songs just like that. Hearing it on the take, it doesn't sound like anything the customers would pay for, but when the result comes back on the playback the number has what makes Ruggles nod his head, the set crew to grin with pride.

Warner Brothers have created a clearing in northern California redwood country for "Valley of the Giants". The town, called San Hedrin in the picture, is supposed to be Eureka in 1901. There's a big redwood stump in the square, a trainload of giant logs running through, all created by the prop department.

The Peter B. Kyne story has been made twice before, once with Wallace Reid, other time with Milton Sills. Both were seriously hurt making its rugged sequences and Director William Keighley and the crew are shooting this version with fingers crossed lest the Hollywood cycle of three strike Wayne Morris, who plays the current hero.

Wayne got a pretty bad bump already in a rough and tumble with some of the heavies in this picture — Alan Hale, Harry Cording, Charles Bickford, Russel Simpson and Donald Crisp. So they are watching even more carefully as Hero Morris comes galloping in with news of a timelier grabbing scheme, riding a pitching buckboard, driving a team of spirited horses.

All goes well until the closeup. Then in a flash, the cycle is almost completed. The restive team dashes off, the buggy wheels catch in a light tripod and the buggy almost goes over.

The horses are halted, unhitched, and Director Keighley orders four men to get in the shafts and drag the buggy for the retake.

Warners are taking no chances on their big production being held up by a third accident to a hero of "Valley of the Giants."

On the "Mother Carey's Chickens" set at R.K.O., Ruby Keeler, enervated by her year's rest from the screen, is socking Ralph Morgan on the head with a feather. Anne Shirley is helping

Bing Crosby

Soon the air is full of feathers, with Morgan on the floor sputtering and protesting. "Is this any way to treat an officer of Uncle Sam's navy?" he spits out between feathers.

Rowland V. Lee, the director, answers, "You're lucky the girls are hitting you with pillows."

Ruby comes over: "I was as nervous as a cat when I came to work. But that fight certainly took away the jitters." She holds out a hand to show how steady she is.

But Morgan seems to be in difficulty. He is holding his mouth open in a strained way, his nose twitching. It's his hay fever coming on again.

A nurse, warned about the effect of the feathers rushes up with an atomizer for Morgan's nose, which is emitting blasts that sound like Dwarf Sneezey in "Snow White". The treatment works. The cast lines up again for the pillow fight.

Suddenly Morgan pauses, his face assumes an agonized expression. The nurse rushes up with the nasal spray waiting for the word to go into the scene. Ralph hesitates, waits. The agonized look dies away and he smiles with relief.

"Let's go," he says, and the crew gets busy before another sneezing attack comes on. For even a sneeze adds to overhead.

DIFFERENT GAMES

MATCH POINT duplicate and rubber bridge are two different games. Though most bidding and playing situations are treated alike in both, there are plenty of problems which require separate consideration. One of these is opening the bidding in fourth-hand position. If a player has put in a lot of time at duplicate, he must be careful to avoid bringing his newly developed habits back to rubber bridge, especially when the opponents have a part-score.

South and having a part-score of forty from the previous deal. In the East was a duplicate enthusiast who had learned that it pays to open an average hand in that spot when most of his cards are in the major suits.

East, following his custom, bid one spade. Knowing him as sometimes bidding very weak hands in the last position, West preferred responding with one no trump rather than two hearts. After North and East passed, South bid two clubs, West two hearts and North three clubs. Recalling that his partner was too weak to bid his two hearts on the first round, East decided to pass this.

In penance for his sin, East had to watch the opponents make their contract, which, with their part-score, gave them a game. "Gave" is right. East should not have dreamed of opening the bidding under the circumstances existing.

STYLE WHIMSIES

The straight silhouette with soft top for both coats and dresses is the accepted fall silhouette, say stylists.

TELEPHONE TALKS IN THE WATSON FAMILY

That LONG DISTANCE
Habit is Catching!

The Watson youngsters are not merely playing telephone—they are playing Long Distance; for Long Distance is a habit with the Watson family—an inexpensive habit that saves anxiety and helps keep the family together. Let the telephone extend your horizon beyond your immediate neighbourhood. Let it keep you in touch with faraway relatives and friends—the cost is surprisingly small.

Reductions in telephone rates—local and long distance—in 1935, '36 and '37 have effected savings to telephone users in Ontario and Quebec of nearly one million dollars yearly.

Successful Shoot At Gun Club

The Merchandise and Novelty Shoot, held by the local Gun Club on Tuesday, May 24th was quite successful despite the prevailing high winds. Mr. Van Haerlem, of St. Catharines Skeet Club, was high gun, winning two first prizes. D. A. Konkle of Beamsville and N. H. Culp, Vineland, were runners-up with a first and second prize each. The novelty prize, a Virginia Sugar Cured Ham, donated by the president, T. A. Sims, was won by Dr. G. A. Sinclair. This prize was competed for by members only.

The prize list was distributed as follows: Mr. Van Haerlem, Russell Aikens, T. A. Sims, M. H. Culp, Mr. Emmitt, Dr. G. A. Sinclair, G. E. Warner and D. A. Konkle.

There was a fine showing of the local members, as well as many visitors from St. Catharines, Vineland, Beamsville and Fruitland.

The officers of the Grimsby Club are to be congratulated for the manner in which the affair was handled and for the fine type of prizes offered.

Just what class of ball will be provided in the Town Softball League will be answered tonight when Ken Nelson's Marvels hook up with Roger Hawes Foundry nine.

However, this is another year, and with this league in operation as well as the Fruit Belt league the fans will sure get plenty of softball entertainment.

Next Tuesday night, Bill Palmer's mountain team will oppose Hammel Fox's Merritt's entry.

The schedule calls for town league games every Tuesday and Thursday evenings from now till August 16.

Grimsby Defeats Beamsville 10-6

Played on Local Grounds Last Friday Night — Player is Suspended.

Apart from the fact that the Grimsby team won their second straight start of the season in last Friday night's Fruit Belt Softball league game, the highlights were Mochenaki's home run clout, and the near riot caused when catcher Foster of Beamsville, argued himself out of the game with umpire Fisher. Also Juhlke's play in what looked like a deliberate trip when Hyland was crossing first base, caused the ire of the fans to flare up.

However, the local team showed the public that they are going to be in there when the playoffs arrive by trouncing the opposition by the score of 10 to 6.

League Executive Gives Suspension

Also a Warning To Players Who Indulge In Deliberate Rough Tactics.

At a meeting of the executive of the Fruit Belt League held last Friday evening, player Foster was suspended for one week for his attack upon Umpire Fisher in the game at Grimsby. Another Beamsville player, Juhlke, was given a warning for his action in the game of tripping an opposing player.

The executive has decided to send out notices to all teams in the league that the umpires will be fully protected and would be backed up in all their decisions. Any player committing misdeeds on the diamond will be suspended for a minimum of one week, while a second offence will mean suspension for the season.

An application by Beamsville to use Johnny Dyck, of Vineland was rejected by the executive which ruled that boundaries must be lived up to according to the present rules of the league. 1938 schedules were delivered to the representatives of the various clubs.

Bowling

A friendly game of mixed doubles was held on the Bowling greens on Tuesday afternoon, when there were five rinks participating. The prize for the high score went to I. Robbie and Thomas Miller and the second prize to D. E. Anderson and A. Miller (Toronto).

Grimsby Band will give a concert at Smithville in conjunction with the entertainment being held under the auspices of the Business Men's Association of that place, this Friday night.

The same law...

Clubs form a valuable part of our social structure.

They encourage co-operation and mutual understanding. They promote activities that benefit our social life.

Many of these clubs are granted authority by the Liquor Control Board to serve beer to their members.

To many of them, especially Veteran and Labour Clubs, this provides useful assistance in improving the accommodation in their premises and increasing the scope of their good work.

The opportunity which these clubs provide for relaxation is provided also in hotel beverage rooms to those not fortunate enough to be members of a club—but to whom relaxation is as essential.

The same law provides for both.

The present law permitting Veterans' Clubs to sell beer to their members has been of great assistance in maintaining suitable club rooms and has enabled them to expand their efforts to assist ex-service men and overcome their economic difficulties and physical handicaps. In the past the bootlegger received a large part of this revenue, which now is used in the interests of groups of patriotic citizens bound together by their service for their King and Country. Veterans' Clubs are a great asset to any community as they stand as veritable Giblaltars of patriotism in the midst of unsettled conditions and foreign "isms."

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON PREVIEWED

The Golden Text

I Cor. 9:25—"Every man that striveth for the mastery is temperate in all things."

Maintaining Personal Efficiency
PREVIEW OF THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By DR. ALVIN E. BELL

(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for May 29 is Daniel 9:24-27, the Golden Text being I Cor. 9:25, "Every man that striveth for the mastery is temperate in all things.")

"IF YOU DRIVE, don't drink; if you drink, don't drive," is a slogan to which no reasonable person can object. Driving an automobile in modern traffic is so hazardous to oneself and to those with him and about him that it requires the maintenance of the highest possible degree of efficiency.

Purpose of Heart

The young man Daniel points us to the surest way of maintaining such personal habits of life as will be conducive to temperance and its consequent personal efficiency: "Daniel purposed in his heart that he would not defile himself with the portion of the king's meat, nor with the wine which he drank." It was an inner and voluntary restraint which Daniel put upon himself, a strong inner purpose of heart which made him master of, rather than slave to, his environment. Back of this purpose of heart was a deep religious desire to be all that his God would have Daniel be, and he was willing to suffer self-denial to live up to the best of which he was capable for the sake of the God whose name Daniel carried about as a part of his own name.

"As Do the Romans"

"When in Rome, do as do the Romans" was in no sense the policy of Daniel and his associates. They were away from home with no home restraints to respect. They were slaves with no reputations at stake, yet they did not yield to the temptation to let down in their manner of life. Their religion and morals were in no sense dictated by the changes of geography or social position. "Everybody is doing it" was no reason for Daniel to do it. He had the courage to be himself though he stood alone, a slave against the mighty. "Prove thy servants ten days" and at the end of the trial period of simple living "their countenances appeared fairer . . . than all the children which did eat the portion of the king's meat." The temperate, self-disciplined life is a life of no regrets.

Poems That Live

LOVE IN THE WINDS

When I am standing on a mountain crest,
Or hold the tiller in the dashing spray,
My love of you leaps foaming in my breast,
Shouts with the winds and sweeps to their foray;
My heart bounds with the horses of the sea,
And plunges in the wild ride of the night,
Flaunts in the teeth of tempest the large glee.
That rides our Fate and welcomes gods to fight.
Ho, love, I laugh aloud for love of you,
Glad that our love is fellow to rough weather,—
No fretful orchid hothoused from the dew,
But hale and hardy as the high-land heather,
Rejoicing in the wind that stings and thrills,
Comrade of ocean, playmate of the hills.

GRACE FOR LIGHT

When we were little childer we had a quare wee house,
Away up in the heather by the head o' Brabla Burn;
The haes we'd seen them scootin' an' we hear the crowing grouse,
An' when we'd all be in a night ye'd not get room to turn.

The youngest two she'd put to bed, their faces to the wall,
An' the lave of us could sit aroun', just anywhere we might;
Herself 'ud take the rush-dip an' light it for us all,
An' God be thanked! She would say—"now we have a light."

Then we be to quiet the laughin' an' pushin' on the floor,
An' think on One who called us to come and be forgiven;
Himself 'ud put his pipe down, an' say the good word more.

May the Lamb o' God lead us all to the Light o' Heaven!

There's a when things that used to be an' now has had their day,
The nine Glens of Antrim can show ye many a sight;
But not the quare wee house where we lived up Brabla way,
Nor a child in all the nine Glens that knows the grace for light.

COMFORTABLE AS AN OLD SHOE

"How To Do Publicity," a new book by R. C. Mayer, includes a chapter that should be of special interest to our readers. In the course of this he opens with two pointed sentences, "the country weekly is the most popular week-end visitor of the rural community, welcomed fifty-two times a year. In some families it has been a fixture for generations." Further, Mr. Mayer says, "it is in most instances a tried and true friend, arriving some time on Thursday or Friday. It puts on no airs, is as comfortable as an old shoe, talks the language of the people it visits, knows them well and understandingly, tells its news of the neighborhood simply and quickly in a spirit of good-will, does not overstay its welcome and drops out of sight until another week rolls around." And, again, "the country weekly has been for generations and still remains the sensitive news centre of towns, villages and the widespread countryside. It is woven out of the fabric of the lives of the people who read it. It maintains close association and intimate contact with them. No other vehicle for carrying information is more personal in its relationships with its readers."

NOTES ON Canadian Birds By G.H. RICHARDSON

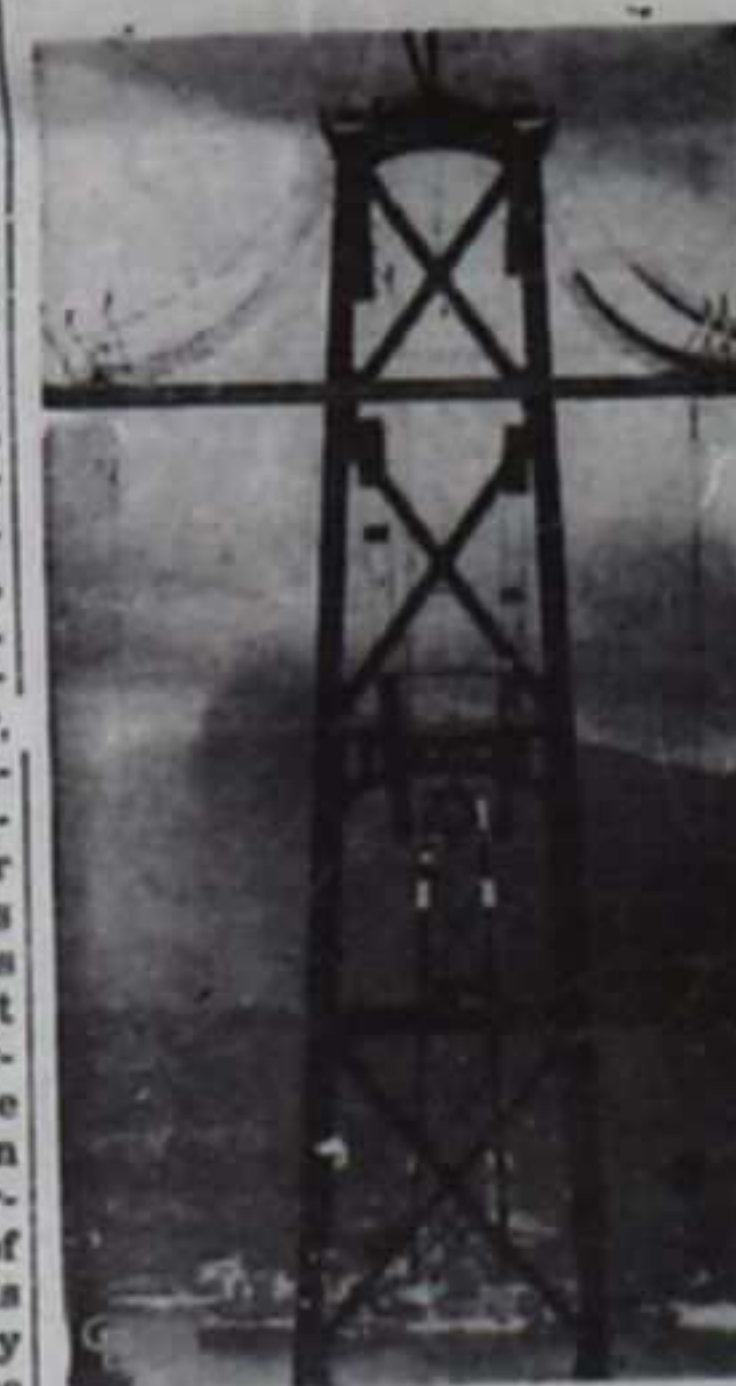

The warm spell of early May has had the effect of inducing various species to appear in Canada a week or more earlier this year than usual. Among the Warblers, the Bay-breasted Warbler, which usually shows up around May 19, or later, has been observed at Toronto on May 7. This irregularity may only be local, but on the other hand it may extend over a wide area, no doubt following the areas of warm temperature. And it shows how difficult it is to predict the movements of birds for any given year.

Speaking of warblers, one of the commonest migrants is a positive gem if seen at close quarters. The Blackburnian Warbler is black on the back, with yellowish white stripes; the crown, back of neck, cheek patch, and streaks below, black; a white splash on the wings; abdomen yellowish white; throat, stripe over eye and small patch in crown, flaming orange. This species nests in coniferous trees, with a preference for Hemlocks, in eastern Canada west to Manitoba.

A Distinctive Song
The Black and White Warbler is all patterned with blue-black and white. It creeps around tree trunks commonly, like a nuthatch, head

NEW BRIDGE

The Lions Gate bridge which will span the First Narrows, famous entrance to Vancouver's harbor, is beginning to take shape. Cables which carry the catwalks have been strung between the two 400-foot piers and soon the huge steel cables which will carry the bridge will begin to move the bridge from the south with the partially completed catwalks—used only during the construction work—and one of the tall steel towers which will support the suspension span.

down or up. This bird nests in Canada throughout the wooded sections west to the foothills and north into the Mackenzie Valley. Its song is quite distinctive, a thin high tas tas tas tas tas tas tas with the accent on the first and subsequent alternate notes (which are the same) the other notes being a half-tone higher.

The latter half of May, and the first two weeks of June are the height of the shore-bird migration. Sometimes these interesting birds may be very shy, and at others quite confiding. Sometimes one may come upon a small flock on a beach where the birds are nearly crowded out by bathers. Yet while they are rather nervous they still remain, probably too hungry to leave in search of more peaceful surroundings.

"Peeps" Most Common Species

At this time, the most common species are two very small ones collectively known as "peeps." These little sandpipers, or sparrow below, and so much alike that it requires a close scrutiny to tell them apart. The Semipalmated is so called from the small webs at the base of the toes. This distinctive mark, is however, of practically no use in identifying the bird in its haunts. Fancy trying to see this web (about one quarter inch long) when the bird's feet blur as it runs, like the spokes of a car in motion. The Semipalmated has a slightly heavier bill than the Least, and its legs look black while the Least's are light olive-green.

Spotted Sandpiper (Top)
Semipalmated Sandpiper (Bottom)

Running for a few steps and then pausing to wag its entire rear end with great vigor, a Spotted Sandpiper makes its way along the shore. This body-wagging distinguishes it at once. In color it is dull olive-green above with black bars, below white with black spots. Its musical whistled "weet, weet, weet" as it flies with a characteristic flutter and glide, is a note unlike that of any other sandpiper.

Stamps are being more and more used as an advertising medium. In recent months numerous stamps have appeared which serve plainly to show produce, scenic attractions, sport centres, or political propaganda. With propaganda among nations daily increasing, it is but natural that stamps should also serve to tell the national story to the world.

Collectors to-day have a better chance to learn about countries from their stamps than ever before. In the matter of produce, Brazil recently issued a stamp to feature its coffee exports. Costa Rica its cocoa, British Honduras its citrus fruits, Egypt its large cotton-growing industry, Bulgaria its exports of rose oil. In other years, Canada has shown its vast wheat fields on stamps of 1928 and 1930. Newfoundland in numerous issues its codfish salmon, big game hunting, iron ore and lumber produce, and Colombia its cattle, coffee, oil, bananas and minerals.

Beauties of Country Depicted
In the matter of scenic attractions and sport centres, Finland has issued a ski set recently. Norway has just issued a set to show its fjords; Poland, Czechoslovakia and Liechtenstein have gone out of the way to show the beauties of their countries and cities on stamps; Olympic games stamps have been issued in recent years by the United States, Germany, Panama, Belgium and Holland; British colonies, like Bermuda, British Guiana, Malta, Ceylon and Fiji Islands have featured beauty spots; national parks have been played up in recent issues of the United States and the Belgian Congo.

Politically, such developments as the Austro-German union, the 20th anniversary of the Russian Soviet army, the Italian conquest of Ethiopia, have been marked with special stamp issues by these countries.

Because stamps serve to carry mail to the far corners of the world, they will continue to be more and more used as an advertising medium for the nations of the world. In fact, the process may go further, as internationally trade-marked merchandise manufacturers learn that in South Africa and in England a certain amount of advertising for the post-office and manufacturers is carried on the white borders of sheets of certain values and with stamps sold in booklets.

Recent Issues

New issues include the George VI set for Antigua, the four Royal Family values of Newfoundland, the twelve stamps featuring the League of Nations and international labor department buildings at Geneva by Switzerland, the Spanish republic's stamp for the 150th anniversary of the United States constitution with the statue of liberty and the flags of republican Spain and the United States in the background, the new scenes from Norway, the overprinted issue from Panama for the opening of the teacher's school at Santiago, a stamp from Czechoslovakia featuring the legions of the republic on the Italian and French fronts in the world war, a commemorative from Cuba to mark the 25th anniversary of the first flight of a mail aeroplane from Key West, Florida, to Havana, a set to mark the 400th anniversary of the founding of Columbia's capital Bogota, a stamp featuring the Finnish harbor of Tallin, a five value set from Senegal featuring a native woman, a 3-cent stamp to mark the 150th anniversary of the ratification of the United States constitution to be placed on sale at Philadelphia on June 21, the 2-cent value of the United States presidential set which appears June 3.

Poems of Spring And Fall

My wrist watch ceased to run for me, the nasty horrid thing.
The jeweler said he thought the trouble all was in the spring.
But it wasn't in the spring, it was in the fall,
You see I dropped it on the floor.

The other night I went to bed, I soon was in a swoon,
I did not hear the breakfast bell, I slept right through 'till noon;
I thought it was the mattress that had made sleep to me cling,
The doctor said that I was wrong, the cause was in the spring.

But it wasn't in the spring, it was in the fall,
You see as soon as I got into bed, I fell asleep.

I watched a diver at the pool, high on a spring-board stand,
His foot slipped off before the spring, he hit upon dry land;
I asked him if he hurt himself, why did he do that thing?
He said he thought the reason was located in the spring.

But it wasn't in the spring, it was in the fall,
His foot slipped.

I took my car the other day out for a little spin,
The way that old car bumped and bumped was little short of sin;
I took it to a garage man, (I think his name was King.)
He said: "Yer injun runs all right, the trouble's in the spring."
But it wasn't in the spring, it was in the fall,
The car fell over an embankment.

I spent my holidays last year, way out upon a farm,
They had no well, they had no pump, altho 'twas very warm;
I asked the woman where she got their water, (silly thing.)
She smiled and said: "Why, can't you see, we get it in the spring."
But it wasn't in the spring, it was in the fall,
The waterfall.

Maintaining Personal Efficiency

ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Scripture—Daniel 1:8-16; 19, 20; I Cor. 9:24-27.

By the Rev. Alvin E. Bell
And Alfred J. Buescher.

Daniel was a captive in Babylon when the overseer of the king's slaves brought food and wines, which Daniel's religion forbade eating. "Daniel purposed in his heart that he would not defile himself."

Instead he requested that he and his companions be given other food. "Let them give us pulse to eat and water to drink." On this simple diet they fared much better than did the others.

Paul wrote in a letter to his friends at Corinth advising them to live temperately in all things: "I buffet my body, and bring it into bondage," said Paul, as he urged self-control in personal habits.

Paul likened the Christian life to an athlete's training. "Every man that striveth in the games exerciseth self-control." Eternal life is worth the same control. (GOLDEN TEXT—I Cor. 9:25.)

CANADIAN GARDEN SERVICE

By GORDON LINDSAY SMITH

An Early Start
Much more fun, much more satisfaction results where gardening is spread over the entire season. While the whole plot may be planted in a single afternoon, usually about the middle of May, the inevitable consequence is a rush of flowers or vegetables followed by practically none at all. On the other hand by only sowing a part of the seed of each packet at one time, by using short cut methods in the way of started plants, by providing a little protection against early frosts next fall, the amateur garden can be made almost continuously productive.

For first bloom and first vegetables experts depend largely upon started plants. These may be purchased from reliable green houses in flats already grown or they may be grown by the gardener himself from seed started indoors now. Seed of petunias, marigolds, cosmos and such flowers and tomatoes, cabbage, head lettuce and other vegetables are sown in shallow boxes or little pots or paper boxes and started in sunny windows right away. The best soil for this purpose is a mixture of sand, fine earth and possibly a little rotted leaf mould. With plants that do not take kindly to transplanting sometimes small individual boxes or pots are used or sometimes special paper holders that have no bottom. Then when the ground is warm outside either box and all are planted or the pot is carefully removed leaving soil intact about the roots. Where pots or boxes are not available sometimes a sod is used, the same inverted and the seed planted. When the plant is ready to go outside sod and all of a generous piece of it is planted. This permits the operation of transplanting without disturbance to root.

And a Late Finish

In addition to using started plants the new gardener is also advised to spread his sowing operations over several weeks, especially so with vegetables. One third of the seed can be sown at the earliest possible date outside, one third at the normal time and one third two to three weeks later than usual. This practice is long perfectly feasible with the corn, carrots, beets and it ensures the very freshest vegetables, just reaching maturity, all through late summer and fall.

With early vegetables like peas and leaf lettuce, however, where first growth in the cool part of the season is essential it is best to sow all seed first thing in the spring. Harvesting season in this case is spread out by using at least one early, one medium and one late variety.

To add still further to the season it is possible to bring in just before the first severe frost next fall tomatoes, vines and all, celery, corn with the stalks attached and hang or store in some cool place like garage or cellar where the cobs or fruit will go on maturing slowly for weeks after frost has blackened everything left outdoors.

Improving the Soil

Extreme types of soil are no longer taken as an excuse for a poor garden. No matter how heavy or how sandy the ground at ones disposal some plant will find such earth to its liking and in any case so far as a small garden is concerned it may be changed to any type desired.

Heavy sticky clays are made loose and pliable by the addition of plenty of rotted leaves, or other vegetable matter which scientists term humus or fibre. Extreme cases may be treated with sand or ordinary coal ashes from stove or furnace. Liberal applications of manure and good cultivation will help and also digging under green crops of clover, oats or just weeds.

Where very damp it may be necessary to provide drainage either by open ditch, tile or by removing a foot or two of the top soil and putting in a layer of cinder stones or gravel. This practise is particularly desirable for preparing a rose bed.

Light soils also benefit by heavy applications of manure, rotted vegetable matter or dug in green crops. This will increase their humus content and allow them to absorb and hold moisture. Light soils of course will not require the constant cultivation necessary with heavy types.

Weekly Garden - Graph

Written by DEAN HALLIDAY for Central Press Canadian

Asparagus wilt

Every home gardener is eager to feast upon his own "home grown" asparagus, but do not make the mistake of continuing to cut it over too long a period or next year's yield will be reduced.

All cutting of asparagus should stop around June 20. This allows the plants to grow and strengthen the crown for next year's supply.

Once an asparagus bed is established it requires but little care; keep watch, however, for signs of wilt. This Garden-Graph shows how wilt affects the asparagus stalks just after they have shot up above ground. If many of the plants show this wilting, new healthy stock should be started in another location. If just one or two plants show wilt they should be destroyed, roots and all.

Modern Forestry In Canada

A report of activities at the Petawawa Forest Experiment Station in Ontario, where foresters, entomologists, pathologists and other scientists, are at work, reveals how modern forestry methods are being applied in Canada. Maintained by the Dominion Forest Service, Department of Mines and Resources, Ottawa, this experiment station comprises about one hundred square miles on which the forest was originally predominantly white pine, with some hardwood and spruce-balsam types, and is fairly typical of the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence forest region, particularly the Ottawa Valley, which has long been a famous centre of lumber production. The station area has been logged over during the past twenty years and subjected to fires from time to time, but there are two main age-classes, now sixty and forty years old. The present forest conditions range from barrens resulting from repeated fires to densely stocked second growth stands of white and red pine and mixed woods.

For the past twenty years the Dominion Forest Service has been conducting forest research on this area with a view to developing methods of improving the quality and quantity of timber in immature stands to provide better and earlier crops. The treatment consists largely of intermediate cuttings, cleanings, thinning, improvement cuttings, girdling and pruning. Problems of a more fundamental nature, concerning soil, genetics, seed treatment, and artificial forestation are also receiving attention.

The Division of Entomology of the Department of Agriculture, co-operating with the Dominion Forest Service, has established a laboratory at the station for intensive studies of insect life affecting the forests, notably white pine weevil.

In like manner the Division of Botany and Plant Pathology of the Department of Agriculture is co-operating in the studies of diseases peculiar to the pines, poplars and associated species. Special attention is being given to the study and control of white pine blister rust, and initial control measures have been carried out over an area of some twenty-one square miles with a view to its ultimate eradication.

Studies concerning plant growth and allied investigations are being conducted in the field laboratory at the Petawawa Station in co-operation with the National Research Council of Canada.

Zadok Dumbkopf says the letter "I" is very important. For instance, says Dunny, it can change a charwoman into a chairwoman.

DURHAM-HAWS

St. Andrew's Church, Grimsby, was the scene of a pretty Maytime Wedding on Saturday, when Eva Isabel, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Tyndale Haws was united in marriage to Mr. Leroy Kenneth Durham, only son of Mr. and the late Mrs. E. B. Durham, Smithville. Rev. J. Allan Ballard officiated and the organist, Mr. G. Burgoon, was at the organ. The Sanctuary and Chancel were banked with palms, hydrangeas and urns of Spring flowers.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride looked charming in a gown of Ivory Duchess Satin, made on Princess lines and extending in a short train, with tiny satin covered buttons reaching from the Queen Anne collar at the back to the waistline. She wore her Grandmother's Wedding veil of embroidered Brussels net, arranged over her dark hair from a heart-shaped coronet of pleated tulle and orange blossoms, and extending beyond her train. Her shower bouquet was of Tailsman roses and baby's breath.

The Maid of Honour, Miss Alice Haws, only sister of the Bride, wore a becoming gown of Forget-me-not blue net over taffeta, fashioned in redingote style. Her matching halo was made in Coronet style, from which fell a shoulder veil of blue tulle. She carried a bouquet of Johanna Hill roses and sweet peas. Mr. Henry Haws, brother of the bride, was best man.

A reception was held at Rossmore, where palms and spring flowers decorated the spacious rooms. Mrs. Haws received the thirty guests wearing a gown of grey silk crepe with matching accessories. Sweet peas and forget-me-nots composed her corsage bouquet. She was assisted by Mrs. Durham wearing a frock of Ashes of Roses silk crepe with matching hat and her flowers were Sweet Peas and Lily-of-the-Valley. Mrs. Elizabeth Durham, Grandmother of the bridegroom, in a black and white crepe frock with matching accessories and wearing a corsage of Tailsman roses also assisted in receiving.

The bride and groom left later on a motor trip to Gananoque and the Eastern States, the bride travelling in a beige reefer coat over an olive green handknitted suit, with brown accessories, and corsage of roses from her bouquet.

Among the out of town guests were: Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Woods, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Guay, Miss Leile Sheppard, Mr. and Mrs. Guile Taylor, Hamilton; Mrs. Thos. Woods, Picton; Miss Gwen Guyatt, Toronto; Mr. Robert Harvey, Watford; Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Merritt, Smithville; Mr. and Mrs. Clara Merritt, Smithville; Mr. and Mrs. Boughner, Beamsville and Miss Annie Durham, Beamsville.

PALMER-SMERYK

St. Mary's Church, Grimsby, was the scene of a pretty wedding on Saturday afternoon, at 1 o'clock, when Father Hlatkie, of Welland, united in marriage Katherine Smeryk, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. Smeryk, of Grimsby, to Gordon M. Palmer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Palmer, of Quil Lake, Saskatchewan.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was attractive in a bridal gown of white satin, with lace trim, over which fell her veil of matching lace, and she carried a bouquet of white roses and baby's breath.

Miss Doris Andreychuk and Miss Anne Smeryk, of Grimsby, as bridesmaids, were both dressed in pink organdy, and each carried a bouquet of pink carnations. Victoria Palmer and Vera Nikolishin, her flower girls, carried baskets of sweet peas and lilies of the valley. The groomsmen were Mr. Michael Leskov of St. Catharines and Mr. Walter Krajewski, of Grimsby.

A reception for many friends was held at St. Mary's Hall following the ceremony, after which the couple left by motor for a trip through Northern Ontario.

On their return, they will spend some time in Grimsby before leaving to take up residence at his home at Quil Lake, Sask.

Guests were present from Toronto, Oshawa and Hamilton.

A MERCHANT'S PRAYER

"Deliver us from buyers who know the price of everything and the value of nothing; who believe that they can get a quarter's worth of value for a dime; who think that cheapness is thrift; who ignore the economy of quality; who believe that they are getting something for nothing when they pay less; who buy things just because they are cheap, and whose god is price." Give us customers who realize the extravagance of paying too little; who can see the bait in a bargain; who know the high cost of a low price; who realize that somebody is always ready to make things a little worse, and so a little cheaper. "Above all, teach buyers that a dependable supply is worth paying for; that courtesy, co-operation and honour in the seller is the buyer's greatest assurance of satisfaction."

DRIVE SAFELY

—and it's hard that they should have to suffer just because they are children.

"Always bear in mind the dangers of over-confidence. The only way to prove that you drive well enough to avoid accidents is not to have any.

"And please also remember that undue refreshment may conceivably give you greater self-confidence—and at the same time less cause for it.

"Consider what a total of 766 killed and 12,092 maimed in automobile accidents in Ontario in one year means in suffering, personal tragedy and remorse — and don't undertake anything merely to show that you can.

"And please don't think you're asked to read the Highway Traffic Act as a personal favor to the Minister of Highways; it was written to help you, and reading it is much less painful than learning by your own experience."

The store front of the Culp Novelty Store and the Royal Bank have received a fresh coat of paint, which brightens their appearance considerably.
